Gov. David Paterson has reappointed Kathryn R. Reed to a sixth term on the New York State Rural Health Council. Reed is senior planning associate for the Institute for Family Health and executive director of the Catskill Hudson Area Health Education Center.

The Institute for Family Health is a non-profit healthcare organization that provides medical care at six health centers in Ulster and Dutchess counties. The Institute also sponsors the Mid-Hudson Family Practice Residency Program based in Kingston and operates the Ulster County Healthy Start and the Dutchess County Healthy Families programs.

Catskill Hudson AHEC, a 501c3 non-profit organization, identifies and addresses health manpower shortages across an 11-county region in the Hudson Valley and operates HealthMatch, a program designed to recruit medical professionals to communities that need them.

Since 2004, Reed has served on the Council as a resident and healthcare executive from Ulster County. The mission of the Rural Health Council is to advise the commissioner of health and to advocate on matters of policy and strategies that improve the health, well-being and quality of life of rural New York residents and promote strong health delivery systems.
